Attorney James K. Marvel Joins Interfaith Community Services Board of Directors

Estate Attorney James K. Marvel has joined local nonprofit Interfaith Community Services (ICS) on its Board of Directors.

Marvel, a 44-year veteran estate attorney in private practice, is a member of the State Bar of Arizona, the State Bar of California and the Iowa State Bar Association. He specializes in charitable gift planning, estate planning, pre- and post-death tax planning and probate trust and administration.

Aside from his solo practice, Marvel was a partner at Fletcher Struse Fickbolm and Marvel PLC from 2011-2017. His extensive community involvement includes serving for the past eight years on the Interfaith Community Services Planned Giving Advisory Council as well as membership on professional advisory committees for Carondelet Foundation, the University of Arizona and the Community Foundation for Southern Arizona.

About Interfaith Community Services:

Interfaith Community Services (ICS) empowers individuals and families in financial crisis to meet essential needs and build self-sufficiency through the ICS Food Banks, emergency financial assistance, case management and job search assistance programs, and enables seniors and disabled adults to stay independent at home with Mobile Meals, transportation, home repairs, wellness checks and health and safety referrals. As part of its comprehensive, holistic focus, the organization also offers outreach programs on whole health and mental health, as well as financial and computer literacy. ICS carries out its mission with the support of more than 750 volunteers, 100 faith community partners and caring donors and community partners. ICS has earned Charity Navigator's highest rating of four stars for seven consecutive years for its financial and operational efficiency and transparency.
