Single Mom Scholars RISE to the Challenge

Guest article by Ryan Sermon

As global pandemic struck our community last spring, students in our Single Mom Scholars program faced an added set of challenges: economic uncertainty, parenting through a pandemic, and managing their children's remote learning as well as their own.

between parenting, studying, working, and self-care. Moreover, these parents face the additional pressure of risking their day-to-day financial support on their way to completing degrees.

The Single Mom Scholars program, which provides merit-based scholarships, aims to mitigate as many hindrances and roadblocks as possible so that these college moms can graduate.

A Word from Tom

Dear Friends of ICS!

As we start 2021, it is partnerships that have brought us this far and they will be the key to our future successes. If we have learned anything these past months, it is that we can accomplish more together. I would even venture to say we will not succeed attempting to do it all ourselves. No organization can. There is great synergy working together and doing what we are best at.

Partnerships are important because they provide us with an opportunity find solutions to multifaceted challenges by using our unique skills and resources. Our partnerships with all our community foundations, corporations, faith communities, government agencies, donors and volunteers have been transformational. These partnerships have allowed us to serve more people with greater efficiency.

Mother Theresa said it best "None of us, including me, ever do great things. But we can all do small things, with great love, and together we can do something wonderful."

many more benefits. Some of these benefits include services for their child(ren): tutoring; back-to-school supplies; and participation in extracurricular activities. However, one of the most unique features the program provides is an atmosphere for scholars to gather and discuss their experiences with others who might share a similar reality. An already challenging situation has been exacerbated by a global pandemic, Covid-19. Women in the program are able to authentically broach a range of topics and bounce off solutions to issues that are pertinent:

- Parenting during the time of corona
- Being a student and shifting to online courses
- Balancing college schoolwork with the educational needs of their child(ren)
- Uncertainty about the job market after graduation

Even during these turbulent times, these scholars are embraced with solace, comfort and a listening ear.

This type of program, which emphasizes a two-generation (2Gen) approach, is part of a larger national coalition of initiatives, policies and other programs. This model aims to promote higher education success for parents and its impact on creating a college-going culture within the household for their child(ren). Through essential partnerships with the Women’s Foundation of Southern Arizona, Social Venture Partners Tucson, Pima County resources, and individuals in the community, this program continues to provide college moms with the resources to assist them in completing their academic program.

Through the early support of community partners and donors, this program was first launched as Helping Hands for Single Moms Tucson in 2015. In order to enhance the infrastructure, efficiency and impact to meet the increasing demand, both the Helping Hands Tucson and ICS Boards voted in 2017 to integrate the program into ICS under its new name, Single Mom Scholars. The incorporation of the Single Mom Scholars program, echoes the commitment and investment that ICS has towards economic self-sufficiency.

One of the quickest growing segments of college students are single mothers. Data from the National Postsecondary Student Aid Study indicates “of the 3.8 million students who are raising children while in college, roughly 2.7 million (or 70%) are mothers. Most student parents are mothers and more than two in five student mothers are single.

Major shifts have rocked our world and local community since this time last year. Down to the tiny molecules of our very being, we see how our actions affect others. The same is true of the impact of one small act of kindness in volunteering for ICS. Whether it is in the act of distributing food, smiling as you drive a senior to appointment, or sharing any of the ICS services with others, we are all in this as one connected entity.

As words like 'messenger RNA' are now mainstream, to conversations that discuss vaccines, so is our message with the same RNA and DNA as we have held for 35+ years. Helping others in need is what we do and volunteers are the heart of this mission. Thank you, ICS Volunteers!

Jay is a born and bred Kentuckian. He has served as a congregational pastor, a regional minister, a substitute teacher and a cave tour guide. A majority of his work in the church was with youth and children. He has a B.A. from the University of Kentucky and M. Div. from Christian Theological Seminary (Indianapolis, IN). He and his wife have lived in Tucson for 3 years and love calling Tucson "Home." Jay is an ordained minister in the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ)

Colleen Trevino, Single Mom Scholars Program Coordinator

Colleen comes to us from years of work as a sexual assault victim advocate, domestic violence shelter coordinator and family support worker. She has moved all over the country as part of a military family, and is settling back in Tucson where she is originally from. She has extensive experience working with children and families alike, and built a program on the Tohono O'odham Nation which she is extremely proud of. Colleen brings skills in crisis intervention, customer service, and strategic planning to our team. She also offers organization skills, kindness and a desire to serve others to our organization, and is excited to join our team.

Partnerships: what we can accomplish together

35 years ago, six congregations founded Interfaith Community Services (ICS) on the belief that we, as a community, can do more and help more people when we come together in partnership.

Those original 6 faith community partners have now blossomed into partnerships with 119 faith communities. ICS has also expanded partnerships with other non-profits, businesses, and government agencies. The values of cooperation and partnership are a part of the DNA that has made ICS successful over the decades.

In 2020, ICS has seen our partners come forward to help like no time in our organization's history. Our partners have found creative ways to help in the midst of this unprecedented situation. When members of faith communities found themselves furloughed or laid-off, they stepped-up to volunteer at the ICS Food Banks, deliver groceries to homebound seniors, or take food bags directly to other faith community partners in areas of high need. Many faith communities held special drive-thru food drives to keep members and volunteers safe while raising food for hungry families.

Some of these faith community partners set huge goals to help the community. One of these faith community partners is St. Mark's United Methodist Church. John Yost, the ICS Advocate at St. Mark's UMC said, "In 2019, St. Mark's donated 1,040 pounds of food to the ICS Food Bank. We thought that was good. COVID-19 changed everything. We have been working together in collecting and delivering food donations to the ICS Food Bank since March, even though the church buildings have been closed for many months. We then set a challenge to the congregation to raise 10,000 pounds and have been overwhelmed by their response. We love ICS and are proud to be a faith community partner since 1985!" At the time of this article, St. Mark's UMC has blown past their goal and has raise close to 16,000 pounds of food.

Like St. Mark's UMC, there have been many faith communities who have gone above and beyond during this challenging year. Without their support, ICS would not have been able to respond to the increased need in our community. We want to thank all of the faith communities who partner with ICS for your continued commitment to helping our neighbors in need.

ICS Loses True Service Leader

It is with deep sadness that we share that Ed Jenkins, Board Emeritus member of Interfaith Community Services (ICS) recently passed away. Ed not only embraced the notion of a servant leader, but embodied every aspect of the concept.

For 17 years, Ed has been the kind of volunteer every organization dreams of: committed to the mission, an intellectual thought-partner, contributor, ambassador and a passionate volunteer. Ed's impact on ICS and the Tucson community cannot be measured, but what we all know is that for him it was a labor of love and we all felt it.

He not only served as Board Chair, but continued as Board Emeritus member, championing our mission and offering guidance to leaders of ICS. Ed and his wife, Kay, established the ICS Endowment Fund in 2009 and started the Jenkins Family Legacy Society. While these contributions were significant he will be best remembered for his steadfast commitment to compassionate volunteering at the front desk, answering phones every Monday morning. We will miss Ed in so many ways, but none more than at the front desk every Monday morning, where he fielded calls from those in need for food, financial assistance, transportation, a daily wellness call or home repairs. He was constant in treating all people with respect, dignity, and caring – a role model for all.

Ed gave freely of himself and was a tireless advocate for those less fortunate in our community. He was an inspiration to all of us at ICS and throughout the community and his legacy will be felt for generations.

Our prayers and thoughts are with the entire Jenkins family and he will be greatly missed.
