Single parents pursuing postsecondary education face challenges that can make completion and graduation virtually impossible. In fact more than half of student parents suspend their enrollment within six years. In this webinar, presenters will introduce the Single Mom Scholars program, a program that successfully graduates single mothers at much higher rates than the national average. Panelists include the program's administrator, a Single Mom Scholar, and their evaluation partner. Q&A will be included for those interested in adopting a similar program model.
